0210 Gas Line for Grill

No Requested By Date Specified

Client Notes

If your home has propane gas it is nice to have a dedicated propane line ran for a gas grill.

If your home has natural gas it can still be done, your grill would need to be set up to accept natural gas.

Back to Top

0400 HVAC Package

Specification Information

Typical HVAC (Heating, Ventilation, Air Conditioning) System is forced air: ductwork which conveys heated or cooled air from main unit to each room. A natural gas or propane forced hot air system is specified to be installed.

Some homes require only one system and some require two systems. Other homes are in-between and can be designed with zone dampening systems with one zone that allows for one furnace with separate controls for first and second floor.

Final design will be predicated upon size of home, client preferences, and system requirements. An HVAC design (called Load Calculations) is completed to determine heating and cooling demand.

Basement areas are typically planned to be conditioned as part of the 1st floor system and if future finishing is desired, the first floor system may need to be enlarged slightly.
